

Utah Certified Food Safety Manager

According the Utah Health Code (chapter 15a, section 104), every foodservice establishment in the state shall be managed by at least one full-time Utah certified food safety manager (however, the food safety manager doesn't need to be present at the foodservice establishment during all its hours of operation).

The responsibilities of a Utah certified food safety manager is to ensure complete compliance with the local food safety rules, and to perform other actions aiming to guarantee serving safe food in the establishment. These duties include training employees in following proper food safety guidelines, overseeing employees to make sure they're applying good food safety practices (handwashing, food storage and cooking), and keeping a clean restaurant.

In order to obtain your food safety manager certification Utah, you'll need to take a department-approved exam to demonstrate your knowledge in food protection management. This exam will test your understanding of foodborne illness causes and prevention, the relationship between time/temperature and growth of disease-causing agents, personal hygiene & food safety, proper cleaning and sanitizing of all equipment and utensils, and how to prevent food contamination. To successfully pass a department-approved examination, you'll need to score at least 70%. After passing the department-approved exam, you have to provide the appropriate documentation to your local health officer within 60 days. When you complete these requirements, you'll become recognized as a Utah certified food safety manager throughout the state.

The programs (and examinations) approved by the state of Utah include ServSafe, Learn2Serve, TAP series, and the National Registry of Food Safety Professionals exam.

If you're looking to become a Utah certified food safety manager, then the most effective way to acquire your certification is to take advantage of FNA Safety's courses. All our online courses are certified by ANSI-CFP and are approved by the state of Utah. You can complete your online program in just one day (from the comfort of your own home), and you'll be fully prepared to score more than 70% and obtain your food safety manager certification Utah.